"Berlin-based artist/VJ/ animator Andreas Karaoulanis (aka bestbefore) twists his computer science and illustration backgrounds together into animated collages for installations and live performances that you will find either riveting or irritating depending on your tolerance for pure abstraction.

I found myself watching Karaoulanis' work (often created in collaboration with musician Antonis Anissegos) repeatedly over several days trying to understand why I liked them so much: the extraordinary compositions and careful muted palettes recalled 20th Century collagists and painters, the randomness and welcome surprises of the motion kept me intrigued in lieu of a narrative... but in the end, deconstructing the pieces was just an exercise, like trying to understand the full body serotonin rush of eating your favorite dessert by examining the recipe card."

"The illustrations in a moving collage type style are so rhythmic. The movements and the flat arrangement of objects and cut outs in a formless and groundless space, in fact, the space is just a background colour in many works, is perfectly in tune with the musicality of the music, not just a synchronised beat but a whole mood, style and playfulness that may not even be apparent in the music, if one listened to the music on its own, but emerges with his playful rhythms and arrangement and positioning of independent yet connected to each other graphic elements. This is really wonderful choreography and movement."
